DR. SAIF-UD-DIN KITCHLU

Dr. Saif-ud-din Kitchlu was born to the Kashmiri Muslim family of Azizuddin Kitchlu and Dan Bibi on January 15, 1888, in Amritsar, Punjab. Kitchlu went to Islamia High School in Amritsar and later obtained a B.A. from Cambridge University and a Ph.D. from a German university. On his return he established his legal practice in Amritsar and soon came in contact with Mahatma Gandhi. In 1919, he was elected the Municipal Commissioner of the city of Amritsar. He took part in the Satyagraha (Non-cooperation) movement and soon left his practice, to become part of the freedom movement as well as the All India Khilafat Committee.

Dr. Kitchlu was first exposed to Indian nationalism when the whole country was outraged by the Rowlatt Acts. To protest the arrest of Dr. Kitchlu and Mahatma Gandhi, a public meeting had gathered at the Jallianwala Bagh, when Gen. Reginald Dyer and his troops fired mercilessly upon the unarmed, civilian crowd. Hundreds of people were killed and hundreds more injured.

Kitchlu rose in the Indian National Congress, first heading its Punjab unit, and then rising to the post of AICC General Secretary, an important executive position in 1924. Kitchlu was also the chairman of the reception committee of the Congress session in Lahore in 1929-30, where on 26 January 1930, the Indian National Congress declared Indian independence and inaugurated an era of civil disobedience and revolution aimed to achieve full independence. He died on 9th October 1963 at the age of 75.
